GENERAL MARKET REVIEW.

MONEY AND TRADE. The Financial Chronicle of Saturday reterial improvement will take place until rels; Illinois, 213,014 barrels, compared congress has shown definitely what laws with 132,631 barrels; Indiana, 29,865 barrels. is impossible to name a branch of business, that the volume of the currency may be largely increased during the present session of congress, so long must business men remain entirely inactive, or only do a "hand to mouth" business, without letting their engagements extend for any length of time into the future. In the meantime complaints are loud in regard to the small volume and smaller profits of business, both in the speculative regions of Wall and Brond streets, and also in the dry goods section and the down town trade of Front and South streets. NEW YORK DRY GOODS.

There is not a very flattering show according to the Financial Chronicle is this line during the winter 26,500 hogs, averaging of trade. The advent of warmer weather 119 pounds net, for which an average price from near-by sections, who have been purway. The demand or full package lots has packing business. not improve any as the season advances. Cotton fabrics are irregular, and the tendtoward a lower range of values. This is but the principal packing cities in the west. natural, and it is likely that the trade during the early months of the season might have been materially greater had prices lowered in the outset. With the cutting of rates by jobbers early in the season came a more or less general disregard for the agreement, entered into during the winter, establishing new terms of credit. By departing from this agreement occasionally jobbers have been enabled to offer extra inducements to their customers, and the new terms have been violated by one and another in the trade until it has become a dead letter. It is a singular fact that this trade is never able to achere for any great length of time to any rule, however desirable, that may be established for its own protection. Stringent agreements, with large forfeits in case of violation, are made alike by jobbers and agents, but seldom amount to more than the ordinary nine days' wonder. We are not aware of the demerits, if any, of the last "agreement" entered into by the trade, but it certainly was credited with and seemed to posses many features especially desirable and calculated to materially benefit the trade.

GRAIN IN EUROPE. The Mark Lane Express says: "The early break up of winter, however, in northern latitudes, has kept the markets so well supplied that buyers have ceased their anxieties to be largely in stock, and prices have therefore still been declining, many places as well as London being is, to 2s. per qr. lower for wheat, with only a dull trade at the reduction. The same sort of markets have been ruling at Paris, which again notes a dealone in flour of 3f.; or 2s. per sack, and a similar fall in wheat; while the provinces in many cases have felt the influences of the capital, and some have given awaystill more, though the decline has been resisted in the south, from the short native supplies. If, however, the calculation be correct that our wants for the cereal year will be as great as Baltimore, live stock .. were in 1873, our receipts in January | A careful scruting of the above figures for ornary have been about 400,000 qrs. and unless made up when the frost is y gone we shall at the end of August of 1,500,000 quarters. New York has gone down 2s. per quarter more, and the winter.

252 during the summer, and 135,652 during grades of Rio at quarter for land at quarter for l entirely gone we shall at the end of August indeed gone down 2s. per quarter more, and the winter. San Francisco also; but a decline in prices San Francisco also; but a decline in hand, does not increase the quantity on hand, though immediate shipments will be greater weekly review of the indianapolis and dispose large holders to the current rates rather than risk the future; and so long as done buyers will have the advantage, but the discouragements of holders on the other time when they are most important, and a coming in for their spring stock in right reaction may then appear as our granatics good earnest. Every day increases the become empty. Belgium has followed number of the welcome visitors to this and France in giving away about one shilling, the German markets; and though the Dan-ube is open, and promises supplies to Hun-gary, it is very remarkable that that prov. ought to be and probably will be lively. erbial land of plenty quotes rather higher rates alike for wheat, rye and maize. The civil war in Spain puts that country aside as remain this way long. Provisions are per-her inspection of pork as well as of grain. The Bulletin makes the following remarks on the subject: "It is quite clear that the system now in operation is open to the most serious abuses, detrimental to our local trade and needlessly embarassing to those engaged in it. As the regulations of the exchange GRAIN IN STOREnow stand, the inspectors possess a power which is open to the most serious abuse, and which, as the trade morals now run, can only be expected to be more or less misused. In very essential respects, the functions of an inspector resemble those of certain customs officers, whose wrongs and extortions are now a matter of foud protest before congress. The inspector is made the judge of the condition, and therefore of the value also of mests, as much as the customs value also of mests, as much as the customs inspector is the arbiter of the value of goods imported; and his report is binding upon the seiler, while the selection of inspector is at the option of the buyer. Is it safe to trust an inspector with such important powers over the interests of the sellers of provisions? Ought the chief commercial organization of this city to give its sanction to regulations which can so easily be made an instrument of exactions upon its members? We do not say that inspectors do use this power corruptly; we are willing to believe that the complaints that inspectors do, through these powers, exact fees and mail from sellers may be exaggerated or unfounded; we hope, for the sake of the honor of our merchants.

The hullding season begins to show signs of for the sake of the honor of our merchants. that no such charges can be proved; but, a the same time, it must be said, that the opexisting regulations of the produce ex-change, and that if the opportunity is not turned to account, the inspectors are a most remarkable exception to the prevaling demoralization of the time, and that, if they have so far proved thus exceptionally honest, the rules and regulations of the exchange are a standing temptation to deprive them of their virtue, all of which shows that there is a serious anxiety in New York on the subject of losing her trade,

BUTTER—The rece lpts have been more liberal.

We look for an early decline, and lower our quotations 27 and 30 cours for best. Slow sales.

EGGS—The market has continued to decline during the week, owing has light demand. The outlook is for lower, rather than high prices, and all we can say to our a hippers is buy at low figures, and do not make your calculations on previous years. The demand has disappointed everyone, and we shall not have it any better everyone, and we shall not have it any better until it is too late for high prices, and perhaps not this spring. Get your prices down.

POSTATRY—Live, in good demand at advance quotations. We quote live chickens by the dozen, and want eleven hers and one rooster; either commercial or financial, which might not be decidedly affected by measures of in
